THOUSANDS HONOR MEMORY OF LOGAN

OHIO HISTORY DAY SUNDAY SIXTH ANNUAL CELEBRATION

Most Interesting Addresses Made By Dr. Howard Jones and His Wife, The Latter Originated and Mothered The Association. Red Men From All Over The State Were Present In Large Numbers, Snake Trail Parade Was a Feature, Excellent Musical Program Rendered—Large Crowd Was Present Despite The Inclement Weather.

Threatening skies did not deter a mass of people from assembling at Logan Elm park Sunday afternoon to celebrate the sixth annual celebration of Ohio History day. It is estimated that fully two thousand people were on hand as four hundred and fifty-six autos were parked in and around the grounds.

An excellent program was rendered. It was, however, a matter of regret that General J. Warren Keifer, former speaker of the national house of representatives was not present as his age and precarious condition of his health would not permit of his coming. General Keifer is ninety years of age. Honorable John G. Carlisle, of Columbus, presided as chairman and he read a letter from Mr. Keifer, in which the latter stated that he regretted very much not being able to be present, owing to a sudden change in his condition over which he had no control.

The chairman announced that Dr. Howard Jones had kindly consented to act as a substitute speaker and gave a splendid address in which he outlined some interesting history of the Indian and also of Lord Dunmore.

Among other things Dr. Jones said that the noble Redman in history was never known to have held slaves. It is true that they adopted prisoners of war into their tribes, but they were free to do and to act the same as any other member of the tribe.

Women's rights were respected among the Indians. The position of squaws among the agricultural Indians was better than among the wandering bands of lower culture, but it may be stated as a rule that the squaws were their own masters controlled their own bodies and lived under the laws of their own making.

In some tribes they were chiefs, as in the case of Grenadier Squaw. The home, or wigwam was the property of the squaw and the papooses were hers.

On this soil, 151 years ago, the relatives of the Indian chief, Logan, and Cornstalk and Grenadier Squaw made their homes. Here it was that Lord Dunmore and Captain Cresap, Andrew Lewis and Connelley made war on the Indians, who were friends of the early settlers. Revenge and bitterness on the part of the Indian naturally resulted.

The speaker said the results of Dunmore war were; first, a genuine English literature, "Logan's Speech;" second, it hastened the Revolutionary war, as the battle at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, was the opening gun in that struggle and, third, it made the Indians friendly to the Colonial English during the Revolution, thus keeping the English out of the war.

The treaty signed with the Indians at Camp Charlotte had an ulterior purpose. Lord Dunmore was a man with royal feudal instincts and he hoped some day to own vast estates in this section of the country and rule over it as the Lords of England did in those days in the mother country. The battle at Point Pleasant was not to his liking, his plans failed, he hurried east and fled, taking a ship for home.

This is history, and history is a Grooms.

picture. The artist makes a picture. I am endeavoring to give you the atmosphere and paint the picture with color, not like Turner, but in my own humble way.

The Indian of bygone days was not as bad as he was pictured by some historians, who only saw one side of the so called savage. In most instances he was a noble Redman, and when he received kind treatment he returned it in kindness.

Mrs. Howard Jones asked all present to become members of the Ohio History Day association. She said she liked the spirit of Ohio people coming out to a celebration like this in such inclement weather. Stimulate this feeling among your children. History makes good citizens and I would like every one here today to come back next year.

The chairman, Mr. Carlisle, stressed the idea of people interesting their legislators in the idea of the state erecting a shelter building to house at least a thousand people for just such occasions as this.

L. E. Miller, Great Prophet of the Improved Order of Redmen of Ohio, continued on page four.

French Blouses Follow New Fall Style Points

Fashion's edict for long sleeves, higher neck lines and flaring lines, are all evidenced in this blouse of black panne velvet, with emplacements of green and white flannel overlaid with black soutache braid. It is one of those pretty affairs to be worn in afternoon or evening with a black satin skirt. For those who cannot wear the very high collar, there are other pretty neck treatments.

AMBULANCE TRIP.

Mrs. Clarence Lutz, of Stoutsville, was removed from her home to Grant hospital Saturday evening in Mader & Ebert's ambulance.

Cleveland.—Hope that Charles Ames, missing New York to Cleveland air mail pilot lost near Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, will be found alive, was virtually abandoned Monday. Inclement weather again forced searchers to abandon the hunt. If the skies clear later today, six army planes, four mail planes and a commercial plane will take off for a final search.

Chillicothe.—Running on schedule the special train bearing President and Mrs. Coolidge and the president's retinue to the American Legion national convention at Omaha, arrived here at 6:40 Monday morning and departed eight minutes later after changing engines. The president was sleeping and 200 Chillicotheans who swarmed the station to see the executive, saw only a few secret service men and newspaper correspondents.

TRIBUTE PAID RESIDENTS OF CIRCLEVILLE

At the Ohio History day meeting Sunday held at Logan Elm park, the chairman, John F. Carlisle, paid a most deserved compliment to both Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones. He said, it is not often that a community has two members of one family who take such interest in local affairs. The doctor in the history of the Indians, and his wife in securing this ground as a memorial to Logan and as a state park. Few women outside of their home duties, pay little attention to the welfare of the public, but the Joneses are different.

Dr. Jones is the author of a most interesting brochure recently published, entitled "A Sidelight on the Making of a Nation." It is most interesting and would be worth your while reading. It places the Indian in a better light, than most historians, and from a different point of view.

DIED IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Edwin M. Patterson Passed Away in Coshocton After Operation.

Mrs. Grace Jack Patterson, wife of Edwin M. Patterson, formerly of this city, died in the hospital at Coshocton Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock where she underwent an operation last Monday afternoon.

She was born in Kingston, was 36 years of age and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jack. She leaves besides her husband six children; Howard, Mary, Louise, Ned, Ruth and Harry Patterson.

Of her immediate family there are living her mother, one brother, Thomas Jack, of St. Louis, Missouri; Star; Mrs. Mary Bookwalter, of Springfield and Mrs. Kate Leopard, of Hagerstown, Maryland.

Mrs. Patterson was a visitor in this city one week ago Sunday, the guest of her cousins, Misses Mattie and Martha Crum and Mrs. Leslie Pontius. She left her youngest daughter, Ruth in their care expecting to return here in a few days.

The funeral services will be held at Coshocton Tuesday. Misses Mattie and Martha Crum and Mrs. Leslie Pontius and M. A. Patterson will attend the funeral. The deceased was a member of the Circleville chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

STORE BURGLARIZED.

Twenty-five dollars in cash was stolen Friday night when a thief entered Friedman's store on West Main street. Entrance was believed to have been made thru one of the doors. A window had also been opened from the inside. The money had been placed in a cash box.—Lancaster Eagle.

SCHEDULE OF FOOTBALL FOR HIGH SCHOOL

The following games of football have been scheduled by the local teams of the Circleville high school to be played on the home grounds this season. Give the home team a boost by putting in an appearance at the games.

October 9, McClain, of Greenfield; October 30, Hillsboro; November 13, Washington C. H.; November 20, Ashville.

BLACKSMITH SOPHIE

Mrs. Sophie Penkinson of New York is the only woman blacksmith in the country. She is fifty-four and plies her trade at a shop in Pike street, doing all the heavy work herself.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Miss Sadie Brunner will entertain the Thursday club in honor of Mrs. Cooper of Los Angeles, California.

Miss Sadie Brunner and Miss Grace Moodie will give a bridge party Tuesday honoring Mrs. Cooper of Los Angeles, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Dundore announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frances Beattie, to Mr. Cary Congdon, Saturday, October 3, at Paoli, Pennsylvania. After November 1, they will be at home at New London Connecticut.

Columbus.—Fifteen planes of the Ford Reliability tour landed safely at Norton field here at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. One plane remained at St. Louis and another came down without mishap between St. Louis and Indianapolis. The plane will hop off at 9 a. m. Sunday for Cleveland.

BALLOONISTS RESCUED FROM ANGRY WATERS

Struck Electrical Storm at a High Altitude and Settled on Lake.

Toledo, O., Oct. 5, (UP).—Rescued from the lashing waters of Lake Erie, two Detroit balloonists forced down while competing in the Detroit News trophy event, were safely back in Detroit today.

The airman, W. C. Taylor, pilot and K. W. Warren, side, were compelled to abandon their balloon at 3 a. m. Sunday. They floated about in an inflated, frail canvas boat until rescued by the steamer A. N. Byers at 11 a. m.

The balloonists were brought to Toledo in an exhausted condition. Later they were revived sufficiently to leave for Detroit. The race began Saturday.

The balloon was one constructed by Taylor and Warren. When over Lake Erie at an altitude of 3200 feet, they encountered a heavy electrical storm. Fearing the bag would be ignited, the men opened the gas valve and allowed the sphere to settle on the lake.

Waves were running eight feet high when they struck the water, they said. The balloon basket rode the waves until the airman succeeded in inflating the emergency canvas boat.

VETERAN DEAD

Alva L. Peters, of East Ringgold, Passed Away in Grant Hospital.

Alva L. Peters, 83, of East Ringgold, Civil war veteran, died Sunday in Grant hospital, Columbus. He had been visiting a daughter, Mrs. A. P. Elliott. He was a member of the 36th Regiment, O. V. I.

Besides Mrs. Elliott he is survived by three sons, O. A. Peters, of Ashville and A. L. Peters, Jr., and Arthur Peters, of Columbus, and four other daughters, Mrs. J. A. Gaffis and Mrs. C. E. Hightman, Columbus; Mrs. John F. Barr, East Ringgold, and Mrs. J. J. Schuster, Los Angeles.

Brief funeral services were held at 9:30 o'clock Monday forenoon in the Hughes, Lindenbalt & Morrison chapel and further services at 10 o'clock in Hedges chapel, near Ashville. Burial in Reber Hill cemetery.

ATTITUDE OF THE PRESS.

President Coolidge thinks American newspapers should take the side of the United States. Real American papers do support the stand of this country in her relations with foreign nations, but not necessarily right or wrong.

There are certain papers which appear to believe that Europe is right and America wrong, which are still under the spell of foreign domination but these are not American newspapers just because they happen to be published here. There are others which are actuated by politics, and what Mr. Coolidge favors will be attacked. But the executive should be enough of a politician to expect that, and not fret over it. Then again America may not always be right. And there are news papers brave enough to say so, and point out the error.

But as between America and the rest of the world, Mr. Coolidge will find the press back of the United States. He has no cause to worry about the newspapers. His worries are closer to home.—Miami Herald.

Six Reasons Why You Should Buy a Stetson

STYLE:

Stetson is the foremost creator of hat styles in the world, each season setting the pace with a sweeping variety of correct shapes and shades—a Stetson to suit any head or face.

MATERIALS:

Stetson Hats are made of fur cut from the choicest selection of Beaver, Nutria, Hare and Rabbit skin. The silk bands and bindings are woven by Stetson; the leather sweatbands are especially selected.

WORKMANSHIP:

Workers of the highest skill, in a model factory, blow and blend the fur, and felt it into hats unmatched anywhere. Each Stetson hat is shaped by trained experts—by hand.

QUALITY:

The blending of flawless materials and deft workmanship gives Stetson its supreme quality—a maximum of wear and beauty or finish.

DEALERS:

The franchise to sell Stetson Hats is given only to the best stores of each community. The Stetson dealer renders a real service to the man who wants a hat that is both smart and becoming.

VALUES:

Judged by style, quality and wear, a Stetson gives you more value for your money than a hat of any other fine make in the world.

SAVE THEM

Circleville, Ohio, R. F. D. 1, Aug. 26, 1924.

MR. F. L. FICKARDT:
All spring I have been having trouble with my flock, both young and old. During July I lost about 100. Quite a number had LIMBER NECK or PTOMAIN. About August 1st, I began use of your DROPS, and I can say the results fully justified your statements. One case of Limber-Neck was too sick to take the medicine. I gave it some with a dropper, thinking then it a waste of time, but the next morning it was still around and finally got well. The rest of my flock straightened out and are doing well now.

Sincerely,

The Custom of the Country

The English have the credit for being a conservative race—a breed in which respect for traditions is so strong that they hesitate to change anything which has behind it the merits of antiquity and established comfort. The story which follows—it may or may not be true—would tend to indicate that this trait really does persist in our Anglo-Saxon cousins.

The tale, as it was told to me, had it that through the fields between two villages in Sussex ran a footpath. It was not the quickest route for one going from one of the hamlets to the other, for it wandered about, but it had been traced originally by the horny, naked feet of Saxon serfs, and now was worn deep into the turf by the heels of countless generations. Everybody in the neighborhood used it, because everybody always had.

A country gentleman lived midway between the towns. He led a reasonably quiet, not to say dull, existence. One day he heard a vicious bull was straying about the countryside, chasing pedestrians, frightening children and generally misbehaving himself.

Seeking for variety from the monotony of his life, the gentleman went forth in the afternoon hoping to glimpse the bull. For four afternoons he sought to discover the whereabouts of the marauder, but with no luck.

On the fifth evening he lingered afield until nearly dusk. He had reached a stile where a hedge crossed the footpath when he heard in the distance, through the thickening gloom, the patter of flying feet, mingled with the thud of heavy hoofs, a convulsive panting and the snorts of some large animal.

Into sight came the local postman, an elderly person. He was legging along at top speed, his mail pouch bouncing on his hip, his whiskers neatly parted by the wind and blowing backward over his shoulder, and just behind him came the bull, lunging with his horns at the seat of the fugitive's trousers.

By half a length the fleeing man reached the hedge ahead of his pursuer. He flung himself headlong over the stile and in its protection lay breathless, while the bull, bellowing his disappointment, strolled off to seek an easier victim.

The spectator aided the quivering postman to his feet.

"He almost had you tonight, Fletcher," said the gentleman, sympathetically.

"E's almost 'ad me every night this week, sir," gasped Fletcher.

The Custom of the Country

I can remember when, in one of the mountain counties of Kentucky, there was only one sewing machine and not a single cooking stove. Things have changed there since. The railroads, bringing with them civilization and its by-products, have crept up through the gaps; the feuds have died out; school-houses have sprung up; there are live newspapers, colleges even, and modern systems of living.

But these things mark the transitions of recent years. It is not so very long ago that life was primitive. They used to tell a story to illustrate how primitive things actually were. It may not have been true. Probably it wasn't, but at any rate it was an illustration, even though an exaggerated one, of a prevalent condition.

There was a narrow-gauge, jerk-water road which skirted through the knobs about the feet of the mountains. One day the train—there was only one train a day, each way—was laboring slowly up grade when the engineer halted his locomotive to let a cavalcade cross the track ahead of him. First there streaked past a pack of hounds, all baying merrily. Behind the dogs followed men, on horseback and mule-back, galloping at top speed and cheering the hunt on with shrill whoops and blasts from a horn. The troupe had vanished into the deep timber bordering the right-of-way when a Northern man, riding in the shabby day coach, addressed a fellow passenger who was a native.

"Sheriff's posse, I suppose?" he said.

"Nope," said the mountaineer.

"Perhaps your people are seeking to lynch somebody?" suggested the Northerner.

"No, 'tain't that neither."

"Then may I ask what is the purpose—the intent—of this chase?"

"Well, mister," said the native, "it's like this: Judge Sim Hightower's oldest boy, Simmy Junior, comes of age today and they're runnin' him down to put pants on him."

Curing the Great Thirst

In the old days there was a philanthropic Tennessee distiller who believed in spreading sunshine wherever he could. One Christmas he sent a gift of prime whisky to an improvident acquaintance who lived from hand to mouth in a cabin up in the hills.

Along toward the end of January the beneficiary dropped in on him and intimated that if his friend was so inclined he could use a little more liquor.

"Aren't you rather overdoing things, Zach?" inquired the distiller. "If my memory serves me rightly, it has been less than five weeks since I gave you a whole keg."

SHOWS WATER POWER DEVELOPMENT GROWING

Report by Department of Interior Says New York Is Leading All Other States.

Washington.—The Department of the Interior, through the geological survey, has just released a report on the developed water power of the United States in 1925. The total capacity of water wheels installed in plants of 100 horse power or more, in March, 1925, was about 10,038,000 horse power, an increase of about 951,000 horse power, or nearly 10½ per cent over the total capacity of water-power plants in 1924 (9,087,000 horse power). Of this increase 99 per cent was in electric public-utility plants and 1 per cent in manufacturing plants.

New York continues to lead the rest of the states in the amount of developed water power. The five leading water-power states in order of their rank and the amount of developed water power for each are as follows: New York, 1,713,551; California, 1,531,480; Washington, 966,693; North Carolina, 534,600; Maine, 476,627. North Carolina has moved from fifth place in 1924 to fourth place in 1925.

The report also contains records of the developed water power for 1924 and 1921 and the estimates of potential water power for 90 per cent and 50 per cent of the time computed in 1914. Based on present practice at fully developed water-power sites, the undeveloped water power in the five states leading in developed water power will permit of the installation of the following additional capacities in water wheels, expressed in horse power: New York, 4,734,000; California, 7,145,000; Washington, 9,072,000; North Carolina, 526,000; Maine, 520,000.

The report indicates that water-power development in the Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic and East-South Central states is progressing more rapidly than in any other sections of the country. New England's relative standing continues to decrease. Development in the Pacific states during 1924 failed to keep up with the rate maintained by the rest of the United States.

Starved as Sculptor, He Recoups as Plasterer

Los Angeles, Cal.—Once upon a time he fashioned the statues of three nations. Now, Humberto Pedretti, world-renowned Italian sculptor, is keeping the "wolf from the door" by working as a day laborer—a decorative plasterer.

"Even for the sake of my beloved art I could not permit my wife and five children to starve," he smiled, taking another dab of cement and applying it to the interior wall of an office building.

Pedretti, once the toast of kings and queens who posed at his bidding, now takes orders from a red-faced construction foreman.

"It is too bad, though, my friend, for an artist to be subjected to this," he paused and then pointed to the freshly plastered wall. "It is atrocious but the American's apparent dislike for art has driven me to it."

"Americans like tawdry art. Something that is decorative but cheap."

"Something that is true and fine—a piece of stone that is in truth the sepulchre of an artist's soul—pouf! Very nice, they say, but that is all. They won't buy it. Too much money, they cry."

Declares Indian Was First American Chemist

Los Angeles, Cal.—James A. Brangan of Philadelphia put the Indian on a pedestal of science at the American Chemical society's sessions here with the declaration that the aborigine was the first chemist on this continent.

The Indian, he said, knew nothing of chemistry and geology as we understand these terms, but he was quick to take advantage of chemical combinations and geological conditions in his surroundings.

To prove his point the speaker cited his method of making flint arrowheads, spears and knives by using a piece of bone scoured or soaked in ashes and water. He also pointed to the Indians' ability to tan hides, make glue from fish scales, waterproof canoe seams with pitch, temper clay for pottery and dye his clothing.

On the subject of the nation's food supply Dr. Charles H. Herty of New York declared that chemistry had forever freed this country from the danger of a sugar shortage by the production of a sweetening substance from corn.

War Veteran's Kind Act Brings Him $6,000 Reward

San Francisco.—For an act of kindness done twenty years ago, Sergt. John A. Weaver, soldier of the World war, has received $6,000, the total value of an estate left him by Mrs. Mary E. Burns, who remembered through the years the kindness shown her when she was a landlady of a modest lodging house in San Francisco in 1906.

Recently recovered from disabilities incurred in the war, Sergeant Weaver came to San Francisco, produced a forgotten letter written by Mrs. Burns, certified its identity at a bank which was advertising for her relatives and later received the entire residue of the estate through a transfer executed by an officer of the Superior court.

explained why the pageant parts from Hiawatha were not put on by the Deerfoot tribe of Columbus, but he announced that he would send out his runner and bring in his tribes. In the course of a few moments the runner brought in five tribes. The Senecas, of Portsmouth; the Monocue tribe, of Wakefield; the Pontiac, of Coalton; the Cornplanters, of Adelphi, and Congo tribe, of this city. The Indians were attired in tribal uniform and they made a picturesque appearance, the ensemble, adding atmosphere and color to the historic meeting.

LOGAN'S SPEECH

"I appeal to any white man to say, if ever he entered Logan's cabin hungry and he gave him not meat; if ever he came cold and naked and he clothed him not. During the course of the last, long and bloody war, Logan remained idle in his cabin, an advocate of peace. Such was my love for the whites that my countrymen pointed as they passed and said, 'Logan is the friend of the white men.' I had even thought to live with you but for the injuries of one man. Colonel Cresap the last spring in cold blood and unprovoked murdered all the relatives of Logan; not sparing even his women and children. There runs not a drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature. This called on me for revenge. I have sought it. I have killed many. I have fully glutted my vengeance. For my country, I rejoice at the beams of peace. Yet do not harbor the thought that mine is the joy of fear. Logan never felt fear. He will not turn on his heel to save his life. Who is there to mourn for Logan? Not one."

Representatives of the following other tribes of Redmen were present; Tucson, of Tucson; Hoga Bogwa, of Dayton; Little Turtle, of Greenville; Deerfoot and Sioux, of Columbus, and the Summit tribe of Summit City. These did not take part in the snake trail.

The singing given as a portion of the program was well rendered. The choir consisted of fifteen people. They were Mrs. Frank J. Bennett, Mrs. Charles T. Gilmore, Mrs. Roland Heiskell, Mrs. Ray Reid, Miss Helen Marion, Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. Walter Tedrick, Mrs. Robert Lee Baird, Mrs. G. G. Leist, Miss Carrie Old, Miss Stella Grimes, Miss Vera Walters, George E. Hammel, John Walters and E. C. Ebert.

Rev. Robert Lee Baird gave the invocation and pronounced the benediction.

Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones entertained those who took part in the program and a number of friends at their home in Park Place after the ceremonies.

Dutch Cremationists Celebrate Anniversary

In Holland there has just been celebrated a curious jubilee—the fiftieth anniversary of the Dutch Society for Optional Cremation. Since this society was founded a radical change of view has taken place in orthodox Protestant circles in favor of cremation. In 1876 a petition was sent to King William III and the second chamber requesting a revision of the law regarding burials and the introduction of a special authorization of cremation. Every year the petition was renewed but no answer was ever made to it. Only in 1913 was the first Dutch crematory at Westerveld, near Haarlem, opened, though cremation was not yet recognized by law. When Doctor Vaillant, the oldest member of the society died in April, 1914, at the age of ninety-six, it was decided to cremate his remains, thus making a test case. The state prosecuted the society but the supreme council of the Netherlands, after a long procedure, decided that cremation was not punishable. Since then the earthly remains of many Hollanders have been committed to the fires in the furnaces at Westerveld.

Sovietizing Gypsies

Soviet Russia is attempting to tame the gypsies. Recently representatives of these wanderers—who are of East Indian origin and have been roving through Europe since the Fifteenth century—formed an association, obtained recognition from the Soviet as a juridical body, and announced their intention to win their brethren away from nomadic habits and induce them to give up fortune-telling and horsetrading and settle down on farms or in industrial communities. In printing this report from Moscow a Budapest paper notes that a similar experiment with Hungarian gypsies was a failure.

A Daring Departure in 1921

.. today, the nation's standard for small home heating

"BEAUTIFUL, yes, but will it work?" Many questions, like this one, greeted the Heatrola in 1921. It was so different in appearance and operation from anything known before.

But Heatrola "worked!" From the day of the first installation, its success was assured. For Heatrola, handsome as a fine mahogany cabinet, and as easy to keep clean, does the work of a basement furnace! It keeps every room in the house, upstairs and down, cozy and snug in coldest weather. And requires no more fuel than any stove requires.

Tens of thousands of homes enjoyed Heatrola's furnace comfort last Winter—many thousands more will own Heatrolas before snow flies. Right here in this community, the homes of many of your neighbors are kept warm by this modern heating method. Let us show you these Heatrolas, and tell you how easily you can own one, too. Phone us—now, before Fall advances further.

Lines and Words in Poetry.

When W. Oron Towson, literary editor of the New York Evening Post, declared in an article last spring that the most beautiful single line of poetry is "A thing of beauty is a joy forever," by Keats, he provoked what proved to be an interesting and widespread discussion among critics and lovers of poetry. Commenting on the discussion the Ohio State Journal declares that it made many people more familiar with great poetic lines and thoughts.

Among some of the lines that were offered against Mr. Towson's favorite are the following:

The frail duration of a rose. — Freneau.

And high above the fight the lonely bugle grieves. — Mellen.

Our little life is rounded with a sleep. — Shakespeare.

The light that never was on sea or land. — Wordsworth.

What I aspire to be and was not, comforts me. — Browning.

Be thine own palace or the world's thy goal. — Stork.

Blossomed the lovely stars the forget-me-nots of the angels. — Longfellow.

Bare, ruined choirs were late the sweet birds sang. — Shakespeare.

Measure me, sky.

Tell me if I reach by song,

Nearer the stars. — Leonora Speyer.

Were I God,

What rapture it would be if but to watch,

Destruction crouching at the back of time. — Clark Ashton Smith.

We don't believe any list of this kind would be complete without those two lines in Shelley's "Hymn to Intellectual Beauty." One is: "Like moonlight on a midnight stream," and the other is: "Like the memory of music field." Meanwhile it would be difficult to say what single line in the English language we admire most. This is because the appeal of music, is gauged by moods of the moment. There are times when one finds beauty and inspiration in dynamic lines. Again one's heart is caught with the wistfulness of a line that is colored by a note of sadness. Shelley declared in his "Skylark" that "our sweetest songs tell of saddest thought;" and in a large measure he is right. It is the line that creep into the heart like a flower's fragrance or the line that flashes into the spirit like the smile of a child that fulfills the demands of the beautiful in art.

It would be interesting to know what the critics have to say about the most beautiful single word in the English language. We hold a love for "memory;" and yet there is something so appealing about the word "sea" or about the word "dream" or the adjective "sunlit," that it is, in the final analysis hard to choose the perfect one. — Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening.

"READING WITH A PURPOSE"

A series of courses of reading on a variety of subjects are being issued by the American Library association. These courses are intended as guides to assist people who are dissatisfied with random reading and want to get the most out of the time available. Subjects on which the courses are now ready are: Biology, English Literature, Ten Pivotal Figures of History, some Great American Books, Economics. Besides the outline prepared by an authority on the subject, a list of from six to a dozen books, selected as best covering the field, are given for further reading.

Ask at the Circleville Public Library about these courses.

AMUSEMENTS

The picture which broke all long run records at road show prices is coming to the Metropolitan theater next Monday when Cecil B. DeMille's production of "The Ten Commandments" opens a four days engagement there at popular prices. Playing the "two-a-day" in New York City, it broke the record of 59 weeks which had been held by "The Covered Wagon," remaining at capacity business for 62 consecutive weeks. "The birth Of a Nation" was only able to last 44 weeks on Broadway, while "Way Down East" "The Four Horsemen" and "The Thief Of Bagdad" held up for a lesser period. About five million people have seen this remarkable picture since it was first shown at a two dollar scale.

In Los Angeles it held up for 31 weeks, Chicago and Philadelphia 20, Boston 14, San Francisco and Cleveland 8; while in Detroit, Washington and Cincinnati it stayed five weeks. Sidney, Australia, played host to it for 30 weeks as did Melbourne; while Paris and Auckland, New Zealand greeted it enthusiastically for 10 weeks. Berlin, as impoverished as it was at the time, played the picture for four weeks, with the best seats selling at five dollars each.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Profitable to Use High Quality Seed

Difficult to Keep Various Strains From Crossing.

The farmer of today, knowing that his grain is graded at the elevator and that the higher it will grade the better the price, is paying more attention to the quality of his seed than ever before. He knows that he cannot produce high-grade grain from low-grade seed and is willing to pay the price.

One of the difficulties in raising pure seed is the fact that plants of the grass family, to which corn and the small grains belong, produce pollen so profusely that it is extremely difficult to keep the various strains from crossing. This is particularly noticeable in corn where two varieties of different coloring grow in adjoining fields. Cobs showing kernels of different color are common.

In order to keep strains pure they must be grown in fields widely separated from fields of other varieties. As hay fever sufferers know, this fertilizing dust from the grain plants is carried for great distances by the wind, making the pure seed grower's task a difficult one.

Pure bred seed naturally is higher in price than lower grades of seed but the product is correspondingly heavier and higher in grade. The grower of fine strains of grain seed usually plants his fields to smaller acreage than the grower of grain for the general market and must exercise much greater care to keep it from contact with other fields. He must surround these fields with some other crops that cannot in any way interfere in the pollination of the seed which he is growing to sell to the farmer who demands the best quality for his acres.

Plan for More Poultry and Production of Eggs

Should farmers plan to increase their poultry and egg production in the future?

The success of such a procedure is very doubtful, according to F. A. Gougler, director of the poultry and egg marketing department of the Illinois Agricultural association.

"Competition is becoming keen in this line," states Director Gougler, "and only efficient producers from now on will be able to make this business pay. I do not think that those producers of poultry who plan to expand their business or individuals who now expect to enter the poultry business should move cautiously.

"So far this year approximately 2,000,000 pounds more of dressed poultry have been shipped to the large consuming centers than the total receipts to August 1 of last year. To be added to this is the information that we now have 37,000,000 pounds of dressed poultry in cold storage as compared with 23,000,000 at this time last year, or an increase of 14,000,000 pounds. Thus we find a large carry-over facing us in the future.

"On considering the present egg marketing situation, we find that there is an increase of 110,000 more cases of eggs in cold storage than reported at this date last year and our export in eggs has decreased as much as 450,000 cases. The reduction in our egg export is partially due to the fact that European countries, who furnished an outlet for our surplus poultry products in the past, are now getting to the point in production where they can supply their own needs.

"Reports from Midwestern states indicate an increase in production this year resulting from the favorable spring season and it is doubtful if the consumption of poultry and eggs will show any great increase in the future."

Feed for Dry Cow

After the cow is dry, the feed should depend largely upon her condition. If she is poor in flesh the feed should be abundant enough so that she will be in reasonably good flesh at the time of calving. If she is in fairly good flesh then little more than a maintenance ration is necessary. If good pasture is available it will be all that is necessary for dry cows. However, if the pastures are poor some additional roughage should be supplied.

FARM NOTES

Treat seed wheat with copper carbonate for smut prevention.

Sanitation is the best safeguard against hog cholera. Clean up the filth in the hog lot.

In horse measurements, three inches equals a palm, four inches a hand, and six inches a span.

It is claimed that the lower the curl in the horse's forehead, the better is his disposition.

Asparagus tops should be cut off and burned. Mark any bare places in the bed so that new roots may be set next spring.

Rhubarb should be well mulched with manure to insure protection through the winter and to provide fertile ground for next year's crop.

Waste apples may be fed to the hogs, and they help out in balancing the heavy corn ration for early fattening. In this way, their value is much greater than the usual return from cider.

Every generation yields its own commercial giants. That talent cannot be inherited.

Church Club Aids Workers in Remote Places.

New York.—The Church Periodical club, a unique co-operating agency of the Episcopal church, has prepared an appeal to the general convention of the church at New Orleans for books, magazines, pamphlets, even newspapers—old and new, and on every subject—to carry on the work which it voluntarily assumed 37 years ago.

This organization's task is to keep the mission workers of the church, especially in the out-of-the-way places of the world, supplied with reading matter.

A globe-trotting lady, entering the hut of a missionary in one of these waste places some years ago, found him perched on a ladder, his head bent back, scanning the columns of an old newspaper which had been pasted over a stovepipe hole. It was the only thing he had to read. That was the inspiration for the founding of the club.

In the intervening years its work has extended to every part of the world. It supplies not only Bibles, prayer books and hymnals, but scientific works, fiction, magazines, newspapers, picture cards and calendars, games, sheet music and phonograph records, all free.

It maintains a score of "traveling libraries" and is practically the sole support of a half-dozen well-equipped permanent libraries in various parts of the world.

The particularly appealing feature of the club's work is in supplying reading material to those who are isolated in the far-off places. Children of the missionaries are not neglected, for to them are sent the latest children's books and games.

During the last year 31,761 current periodicals from 13,000 friends of the club were sent to the workers all over the world; 2,188 Bibles were distributed, 8,866 prayer books, 63,399 books of theological or secular character were supplied to institutions or individuals; and 521,188 old magazines and papers, 212,029 Christmas and Easter cards, 33,052 pictures and games and 9,254 pieces of music and records were put into the hands of workers all over the globe who otherwise would have had little, if any, of these diverting agencies of civilization to beguile their leisure hours

TRY US FOR A WANT AD

"POPE JOAN" CENTER
OF MANY LEGENDS

Fantastic Tale Embellished
by Chroniclers.

Of all the crabbed, querulous, ecstatic tales of the Middle Ages, none is more medieval, and none more provocative to doctors and sages, than the history of "Pope Joan," says John O'London's Weekly. About her and about her they have argued. She was a man, say some; a devil, say others; she occupied the throne of Saint Peter for any period of time from two and a half to nineteen years; she was named alternately Agnes, Gilberta, Gerberta, Margaret, Isabel, Dorothy, or Jutta; she did not exist at all. Probably not, indeed; she achieves but a small measure of verisimilitude in the hands of her chroniclers, and their differing stories do not help her. On one point only are they agreed; with one accord they wag their heads over her moral delinquency, and brand her as having, at a peculiarly inconvenient moment, given birth to a child.

It is between Leo IV, who died on July 11, 853, and Benedict, consecrated on September 29 of the same year, that legend endeavors to sandwich its woman pope. By the end of the Thirteenth century her story had won general credence. At the beginning of the Fifteenth century her supposed bust kept company in the cathedral at Siena with the busts of all authentic popes; and at the Council of Constance John Huss supported his claims by appealing to the case of "Agnes, who became Pope Joan."

The tale swells in extravagance as it grows in years. Stephen of Bourbon says simply that the woman was a clever scribe, who became notary of the Curia and rose to be cardinal and pope. A later version sends her first on a visit to Athens, where by her diligence she becomes a subtle reasoner. The fame of Rome reaches her ears; straightway she packs up her books and journeys thither, to become a professor at whose feet the greatest teachers are eager to sit. Celebrated for her mode of life no less than for her learning, she is unanimously elected pope; but alas! fine living makes her voluptuous, and, yielding to temptation, she falls.

A monk of Malmesbury, writing in 1386, says that, born in Mayence, Joan was sent by her parents to receive instruction in the sciences from male teachers. On one of them she came to look with more affection than became a pupil, and when he went to Rome, she donned man's dress and went with him; and there, because she surpassed everyone in learning, she was made cardinal by Pope Leo.

As to the punishment meted out to the disciple of Satan, when the birth of a child betrayed her, the authorities differ. One of them will have her discovered before her election, tied to the feet of a horse, dragged out of the city and stoned. Another allows her a two years' triumph and a natural death. A third merely deposes her; while Boccaccio (who, the wicked fellow, rather enjoys the tale) permits her to shed a few tears and retire into private life!

Its Advantage

They were discussing the advantages of the various college courses. "So you've decided on an art course instead of a scientific course?" Inquired the girl. "Oh, yes," answered the youth, "it seemed the better course for me." Her next question was, "Why?" and his reply to that was, "Well, everybody says it's easier to forget."

Marital Confidence

The expression "marital confidence" originally meant admission or confession of a fault between husband and wife, which was supposed to be given in the privacy afforded by beds hung with old-fashioned bed curtains.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LITTLEFIELD GETS RESULTS FOR A. L.

Friends of Raymond B. Littlefield say he once had intentions of following the profession of civil engineering as his life work. "Should he not have changed his mind," they say, "he would have been infinitely successful, for he is always engineering something or other to a successful completion."

The latest engineering feat to win him credit was the building of the department of Rhode Island of the American Legion into one of the strongest beams in the national structure of the Legion. This was done during his administration in 1924.

Legion work has been a particularly favorite objective for Mr. Littlefield's engineering genius. He began serving the Legion as a charter member ber of James Stanton post of the Legion, Central Falls, R. I. He served in post offices until the bigger job came in 1923 when at the department convention he was elected department adjutant, which office he held for one year. Indication of his efficiency and popularity as a department adjutant is revealed by the incident of his election to the department commandership by acclamation at the department convention in August, 1924. He is at present serving as alternate national executive committeeman.

The same gradual steps that took him from just a buck Legionnaire to the department commandancy, he followed in the great adventure of 1917-1918. He enlisted in the Rhode Island National Guard on May 23, 1916, and served in that organization with ranks of private, corporal and sergeant. Then came the World war, and he went overseas with the Seventy-third Art. C. A. as a sergeant major, where he served in the line of advance. He was recommended for a commission when the armistice was signed.

Mr. Littlefield was born in 1895 at Central Falls, R. I., where he was educated in the public schools.

Junior World's Series for Boys' Ball Teams

Holding of a junior world's series for boys' baseball teams throughout the country under the auspices of the American Legion will be proposed at the national convention of the Legion at Omaha from October 5 to 9 by the national Americanism commission.

Decision to this effect was reached following a recent conference between Legion officials and Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of the Western conference, who offered his assistance in working out the idea.

Recent developments portend success for the plan, if it is approved at the national convention.

Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, placed his stamp of approval on the plan to form the boys' league.

J. A. Butler, a member of the staff of the National Amateur Athletic association, and Allan Waters, of the Legion's community and civic betterment bureau, are co-operating in working out the details of the plan. Mr. Waters conceived and worked out the details of the plan of the junior baseball league for possible sponsorship by the Legion.

The present intention is to promote the organization of baseball leagues for boys of fourteen to seventeen in all parts of the country, according to Frank Clay Cross, director of the Americanism commission. Championships will be staged by districts, by states and regions, leading up to the national contest to be held each year at national conventions of the Legion. In the junior world series, as it will be called, the victor of all states east of the Mississippi river will play the champion of the West.

The junior world series is one feature of a general plan for Legion activity in sponsoring and promoting a greater active participation on the part of the general public in athletics.

THOUSANDS HONOR MEMORY OF LOGAN

OHIO HISTORY DAY SUNDAY SIXTH ANNUAL CELEBRATION

Most Interesting Addresses Made By Dr. Howard Jones and His Wife, The Latter Originated and Mothered The Association. Red Men From All Over The State Were Present In Large Numbers, Snake Trail Parade Was a Feature, Excellent Musical Program Rendered—Large Crowd Was Present Despite The Inclement Weather.

Threatening skies did not deter a mass of people from assembling at Logan Elm park Sunday afternoon to celebrate the sixth annual celebration of Ohio History day. It is estimated that fully two thousand people were on hand as four hundred and fifty-six autos were parked in and around the grounds.

An excellent program was rendered. It was, however, a matter of regret that General J. Warren Keifer, former speaker of the national house of representatives was not present as his age and precarious condition of his health would not permit of his coming. General Keifer is ninety years of age. Honorable John G. Carlisle, of Columbus, presided as chairman and he read a letter from Mr. Keifer, in which the latter stated that he regretted very much not being able to be present, owing to a sudden change in his condition over which he had no control.

The chairman announced that Dr. Howard Jones had kindly consented to act as a substitute speaker and gave a splendid address in which he outlined some interesting history of the Indian and also of Lord Dunmore.

Among other things Dr. Jones said that the noble Redman in history was never known to have held slaves. It is true that they adopted prisoners of war into their tribes, but they were free to do and to act the same as any other member of the tribe.

Women's rights were respected among the Indians. The position of squaws among the agricultural Indians was better than among the wandering bands of lower culture, but it may be stated as a rule that the squaws were their own masters controlled their own bodies and lived under the laws of their own making.

In some tribes they were chiefs, as in the case of Grenadier Squaw. The home, or wigwam was the property of the squaw and the papooses were hers.

On this soil, 151 years ago, the relatives of the Indian chief, Logan, and Cornstalk and Grenadier Squaw made their homes. Here it was that Lord Dunmore and Captain Cresap, Andrew Lewis and Connelley made war on the Indians, who were friends of the early settlers. Revenge and bitterness on the part of the Indian naturally resulted.

The speaker said the results of Dunmore war were; first, a genuine English literature, "Logan's Speech;" second, it hastened the Revolutionary war, as the battle at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, was the opening gun in that struggle and, third, it made the Indians friendly to the Colonial English during the Revolution, thus keeping the English out of the war.

The treaty signed with the Indians at Camp Charlotte had an ulterior purpose. Lord Dunmore was a man with royal feudal instincts and he hoped some day to own vast estates in this section of the country and rule over it as the Lords of England did in those days in the mother country. The battle at Point Pleasant was not to his liking, his plans failed, he hurried east and fled, taking a ship for home.

This is history, and history is a Grooms.

picture. The artist makes a picture. I am endeavoring to give you the atmosphere and paint the picture with color, not like Turner, but in my own humble way.

The Indian of bygone days was not as bad as he was pictured by some historians, who only saw one side of the so called savage. In most instances he was a noble Redman, and when he received kind treatment he returned it in kindness.

Mrs. Howard Jones asked all present to become members of the Ohio History day association. She said she liked the spirit of Ohio people coming out to a celebration like this in such inclement weather. Stimulate this feeling among your children. History makes good citizens and I would like every one here today to come back next year.

The chairman, Mr. Carlisle, stressed the idea of people interesting their legislators in the idea of the state erecting a shelter building to house at least a thousand people for just such occasions as this.

L. E. Miller, Great Prophet of the Improved Order of Redmen of Ohio, continued on page four.

Cleveland.—Hope that Charles Ames, missing New York to Cleveland air mail pilot lost near Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, will be found alive, was virtually abandoned Monday. Inclement weather again forced searchers to abandon the hunt. If the skies clear later today, six army planes, four mail planes and a commercial plane will take off for a final search.

Chillicothe.—Running on schedule the special train bearing President and Mrs. Coolidge and the president's retinue to the American Legion national convention at Omaha, arrived here at 6:40 Monday morning and departed eight minutes later after changing engines. The president was sleeping and 200 Chillicotheans who swarmed the station to see the executive, saw only a few secret service men and newspaper correspondents.

TRIBUTE PAID RESIDENTS OF CIRCLEVILLE

At the Ohio History day meeting Sunday held at Logan Elm park, the chairman, John F. Carlisle, paid a most deserved compliment to both Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones. He said, it is not often that a community has two members of one family who take such interest in local affairs. The doctor in the history of the Indians, and his wife in securing this ground as a memorial to Logan and as a state park. Few women outside of their home duties, pay little attention to the welfare of the public, but the Joneses are different.

Dr. Jones is the author of a most interesting brochure recently published, entitled "A Sidelight on the Making of a Nation." It is most interesting and would be worth your while reading. It places the Indian in a better light, than most historians, and from a different point of view.

DIED IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Edwin M. Patterson Passed Away in Coshocton After Operation.

Mrs. Grace Jack Patterson, wife of Edwin M. Patterson, formerly of this city, died in the hospital at Coshocton Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock where she underwent an operation last Monday afternoon.

She was born in Kingston, was 36 years of age and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jack. She leaves besides her husband six children; Howard, Mary, Louise, Ned, Ruth and Harry Patterson.

Of her immediate family there are living her mother, one brother, Thomas Jack, of St. Louis, Missouri, Star; Mrs. Mary Bookwalter, of Springfield and Mrs. Kate Leopard, of Hagerstown, Maryland.

Mrs. Patterson was a visitor in this city one week ago Sunday, the guest of her cousins, Misses Mattie and Martha Crum and Mrs. Leslie Pontius. She left her youngest daughter, Ruth in their care expecting to return here in a few days.

The funeral services will be held at Coshocton Tuesday. Misses Mattie and Martha Crum and Mrs. Leslie Pontius and M. A. Patterson will attend the funeral. The deceased was a member of the Circleville chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

STORE BURGLARIZED.

Columbus.—Fifteen planes of the Ford Reliability tour landed safely at Norton field here at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. One plane remained at St. Louis and another came down without mishap between St. Louis and Indianapolis. The plane will hop off at 9 a. m. Sunday for Cleveland.

BALLOONISTS RESCUED FROM ANGRY WATERS

Struck Electrical Storm at a High Altitude and Settled on Lake.

Toledo, O., Oct. 5, (UP).—Rescued from the lashing waters of Lake Erie, two Detroit balloonists forced down while competing in the Detroit News trophy event, were safely back in Detroit today.

The airman, W. C. Taylor, pilot and K. W. Warren, side, were compelled to abandon their balloon at 3 a. m. Sunday. They floated about in an inflated, frail canvas boat until rescued by the steamer A. N. Byers at 11 a. m.

The balloonists were brought to Toledo in an exhausted condition. Later they were revived sufficiently to leave for Detroit. The race began Saturday.

The balloon was one constructed by Taylor and Warren. When over Lake Erie at an altitude of 3200 feet, they encountered a heavy electrical storm. Fearing the bag would be ignited, the men opened the gas valve and allowed the sphere to settle on the lake.

Waves were running eight feet high when they struck the water, they said. The balloon basket rode the waves until the airman succeeded in inflating the emergency canvas boat.

VETERAN DEAD

Alva L. Peters, of East Ringgold, Passed Away in Grant Hospital.

Alva L. Peters, 83, of East Ringgold, Civil war veteran, died Sunday in Grant hospital, Columbus. He had been visiting a daughter, Mrs. A. P. Elliott. He was a member of the 36th Regiment, O. V. L.

Besides Mrs. Elliott he is survived by three sons, O. A. Peters, of Ashville and A. L. Peters, Jr., and Arthur Peters, of Columbus, and four other daughters, Mrs. J. A. Gaffis and Mrs. C. E. Hightman, Columbus; Mrs. John F. Barr, East Ringgold, and Mrs. J. J. Schuster, Los Angeles.

Brief funeral services were held at 9:30 o'clock Monday forenoon in the Hughes, Lindenbalt & Morrison chapel and further services at 10 o'clock in Hedges chapel, near Ashville. Burial in Reber Hill cemetery.

ATTITUDE OF THE PRESS.

President Coolidge thinks American newspapers should take the side of the United States. Real American papers do support the stand of this country in her relations with foreign nations, but not necessarily right or wrong.

There are certain papers which appear to believe that Europe is right and America wrong, which are still under the spell of foreign domination but these are not American newspapers just because they happen to be published here. There are others which are actuated by politics, and what Mr. Coolidge favors will be attacked. But the executive should be enough of a politician to expect that, and not fret over it. Then again America may not always be right. And there are news papers brave enough to say so, and point out the error.

But as between America and the rest of the world, Mr. Coolidge will find the press back of the United States. He has no cause to worry about the newspapers. His worries are closer to home.—Miami Herald.

REAL ESTATE DEAL.

Rev. Claude V., and Lelah E. Coppock sold their property consisting of 7 room frame dwelling located on South Pickaway street, to Mark Speakman and wife. The sale was made thru the Circle Realty Co.

Six Reasons Why You Should Buy a Stetson

STYLE:

Stetson is the foremost creator of hat styles in the world, each season setting the pace with a sweeping variety of correct shapes and shades—a Stetson to suit any head or face.

MATERIALS:

Stetson Hats are made of fur cut from the choicest selection of Beaver, Nutria, Hare and Rabbit skin. The silk bands and bindings are woven by Stetson; the leather sweatbands are especially selected.

WORKMANSHIP:

Workers of the highest skill, in a model factory, blow and blend the fur, and felt it into hats unmatched anywhere. Each Stetson hat is shaped by trained experts—by hand.

QUALITY:

The blending of flawless materials and deft workmanship gives Stetson its supreme quality—a maximum of wear and beauty or finish.

DEALERS:

The franchise to sell Stetson Hats is given only to the best stores of each community. The Stetson dealer renders a real service to the man who wants a hat that is both smart and becoming.

VALUES:

Judged by style, quality and wear, a Stetson gives you more value for your money than a hat of any other fine make in the world.

Circleville, Ohio, R. F. D. 1, Aug. 26, 1924.
MR. F. L. FICKARDT:
All spring I have been having trouble with my flock, both young and old. During July I lost about 100. Quite a number had LIMBER NECK or PTOMAINIE. About August 1st, I began use of your DROPS, and I can say the results fully justified your statements. One case of Limber-Neck was too sick to take the medicine. I gave it some with a dropper, thinking then it a waste of time, but the next morning it was still around and finally got well. The rest of my flock straightened out and are doing well now.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir:—

My Favorite Stories

By IRVIN S. COBB

The Custom of the Country

The English have the credit for being a conservative race—a breed in which respect for traditions is so strong that they hesitate to change anything which has behind it the merits of antiquity and established comfort. The story which follows—it may or may not be true—would tend to indicate that this trait really does persist in our Anglo-Saxon cousins.

The tale, as it was told to me, had it that through the fields between two villages in Sussex ran a footpath. It was not the quickest route for one going from one of the hamlets to the other, for it wandered about, but it had been traced originally by the horny, naked feet of Saxon serfs, and now was worn deep into the turf by the heels of countless generations. Everybody in the neighborhood used it, because everybody always had.

A country gentleman lived midway between the towns. He led a reasonably quiet, not to say dull, existence. One day he heard a vicious bull was straying about the countryside, chasing pedestrians, frightening children and generally misbehaving himself.

Seeking for variety from the monotony of his life, the gentleman went forth in the afternoon hoping to glimpse the bull. For four afternoons he sought to discover the whereabouts of the marauder, but with no luck.

On the fifth evening he lingered awhile until nearly dusk. He had reached a stile where a hedge crossed the footpath when he heard in the distance, through the thickening gloom, the patter of flying hoofs, mingled with the thud of heavy hoofs, a convulsive panting and the snorts of some large animal.

Into sight came the local postman, an elderly person. He was legging along at top speed, his mail pouch bouncing on his hip, his whiskers neatly parted by the wind and blowing backward over his shoulder, and just behind him came the bull, lunging with his horns at the seat of the fugitive's trousers.

By half a length the fleeing man reached the hedge ahead of his pursuer. He flung himself headlong over the stile and in its protection lay breathless, while the bull, bellowing his disappointment, strolled off to seek an easier victim.

The spectator aided the quivering postman to his feet.

"He almost had you tonight, Fletcher," said the gentleman, sympathetically.

"E's almost 'ad me every night this week, sir," gasped Fletcher.

The Custom of the Country

I can remember when, in one of the mountain counties of Kentucky, there was only one sewing machine and not a single cooking stove. Things have changed there since. The railroads, bringing with them civilization and its by-products, have crept up through the gaps; the feuds have died out; school-houses have sprung up; there are live newspapers, colleges even, and modern systems of living.

But these things mark the transitions of recent years. It is not so very long ago that life was primitive. They used to tell a story to illustrate how primitive things actually were. It may not have been true. Probably it wasn't, but at any rate it was an illustration, even though an exaggerated one, of a prevalent condition.

There was a narrow-gauge, jerk-water road which skirted through the knobs about the feet of the mountains. One day the train—there was only one train a day, each way—was laboring slowly up grade when the engineer halted his locomotive to let a cavalcade cross the track ahead of him. First there streaked past a pack of hounds, all baying merrily. Behind the dogs followed men, on horseback and mule-back, galloping at top speed and cheering the hunt on with shrill whoops and blasts from a horn. The troupe had vanished into the deep timber bordering the right-of-way when a Northern man, riding in the shabby day coach, addressed a fellow passenger who was a native.

"Sheriff's posse, I suppose?" he said. "Nope," said the mountaineer. "Perhaps your people are seeking to lynch somebody?" suggested the Northerner.

"No, 'tain't that neither." "Then may I ask what is the purpose—the intent—of this chase?"

"Well, mister," said the native, "it's like this: Judge Sim Hightower's oldest boy, Simmy Junior, comes of age today and they're runnin' him down to put pants on him."

Curing the Great Thirst

In the old days there was a philanthropic Tennessee distiller who believed in spreading sunshine wherever he could. One Christmas he sent a gift of prime whisky to an improvident acquaintance who lived from hand to mouth in a cabin up in the hills.

Along toward the end of January the beneficiary dropped in on him and intimated that if his friend was so inclined he could use a little more liquor. "Aren't you rather overdoing things, Zach?" inquired the distiller. "If my memory serves me rightly, it has been less than five weeks since I gave you a whole keg."

"Well, colonel," explained the mendicant, "you got to remember that a kag of hicker don't last very long in a fambly that can't afford to keep a cow."

Foreign-Born Farmers

Comparatively few of the foreign-born in the United States make their living from the soil. In many cities foreigners predominate, but the land is tilled by about 5,000,000 native white farmers as compared with about 600,000 foreign-born white farmers. Colored farmers outnumber foreign-born farmers two to one. The largest proportion of foreign-born farmers is in California, the figures being 75,000 to 35,000 non-native. Other states that have the most foreign-born on the soil are Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, South Dakota and Washington. New York farms are operated by 25,000 foreign-born and 165,000 native farmers. Throughout the country there are 7,000 Japanese and 600 Chinese farmers.

Combination of Motions

Motion pictures are in reality a combination of still pictures. The first picture of the automobile shows the spokes of the wheels in one position. If the next exposure of the film were made when spoke No. 1 had advanced far enough to be in the position of spoke No. 2, the picture would show no motion, as spokes are identical. If spoke 1 had advanced less than half-way to position of spoke 2, the forward motion would be noticed. If, however, spoke 1 advances more than half way to the observer, it would have the effect of spoke 2 moving backward, as that distance would be shorter and the apparent motion would be in that direction.

HARTMAN THEATER.

Fear of fake medium, spiritualist, astrologist and fortune teller because of his exposures in the past, Houdini, internationally famous mystifier and psychic investigator, will continue his campaign against this band of frauds, when he appears at the Hartman theater, Columbus, for one week beginning Monday, October 5, with matinee on Wednesday and Saturday.

A feature of Houdini's performance which has been divided into three parts to give the most complete exhibition and satisfactory results, will be an expose of some of the famous mediums who have tricked many of the country's greatest scientist and investigators. Accompanying the expose will be an explanation of the methods used by the mediums to defraud an unknowing gullible public.

The other two parts of Houdini's program, which is presented by L. Lawrence Weber, will consist of; first an exhibition of illusions, sleight-of-hand tricks and other feat of legerdemain featured by the greatest magicians of the past century and the present one, and, second, Houdini's own world-famous feats escape from straight jackets, handcuffs and such seemingly impossible places as the Great Water Torture cell.

With scenery and state settings equal to those of any great spectacle of the theater, Houdini's current production has been acclaimed as the most sensational and elaborate of its kind ever seen. Send mail orders now to box office.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. SHOWS WATER POWER DEVELOPMENT GROWING

Report by Department of Interior Says New York Is Leading All Other States.

Washington.—The Department of the Interior, through the geological survey, has just released a report on the developed water power of the United States in 1925. The total capacity of water wheels installed in plants of 100 horse power or more, in March, 1925, was about 10,038,000 horse power, an increase of about 951,000 horse power, or nearly 10 1/2 per cent over the total capacity of water-power plants in 1924 (9,087,000 horse power). Of this increase 99 per cent was in electric public-utility plants and 1 per cent in manufacturing plants.

New York continues to lead the rest of the states in the amount of developed water power. The five leading water-power states in order of their rank and the amount of developed water power for each are as follows: New York, 1,713,551; California, 1,531,480; Washington, 566,693; North Carolina, 534,600; Maine, 476,627. North Carolina has moved from fifth place in 1924 to fourth place in 1925.

The report also contains records of the developed water power for 1924 and 1925 and the estimates of potential water power for 99 per cent and 50 per cent of the time computed in 1914. Based on present practice at fully developed water-power sites, the undeveloped water power in the five states leading in developed water power will permit of the installation of the following additional capacities in water wheels, expressed in horse power: New York, 4,734,000; California, 7,145,000; Washington, 9,672,000; North Carolina, 526,000; Maine, 520,000. The report indicates that water-power development in the Middle Atlantic, South Atlantic and East-South Central states is progressing more rapidly than in any other sections of the country. New England's relative standing continues to decrease. Development in the Pacific states during 1924 failed to keep up with the rate maintained by the rest of the United States.

Starved as Sculptor, He Recoups as Plasterer

Los Angeles, Cal.—Once upon a time he fashioned the statues of three nations. Now, Humberto Pedretti, world-renowned Italian sculptor, is keeping the "wolf from the door" by working as a day laborer—a decorative plasterer.

"Even for the sake of my beloved art I could not permit my wife and five children to starve," he smiled, taking another dab of cement and applying it to the interior wall of an office building.

Pedretti, once the toast of kings and queens who posed at his bidding, now takes orders from a red-faced construction foreman.

"It is too bad, though, my friend, for an artist to be subjected to this," he paused and then pointed to the freshly plastered wall. "It is atrocious but the American's apparent dislike for art has driven me to it."

"Americans like tawdry art. Something that is decorative but cheap."

"Something that is true and fine—a piece of stone that is in truth the sepulchre of an artist's soul—puff! Very nice, they say, but that is all. They won't buy it. Too much money, they cry."

Declares Indian Was First American Chemist

Los Angeles, Cal.—James A. Brangan of Philadelphia put the Indian on a pedestal of science at the American Chemical society's sessions here with the declaration that the aborigine was the first chemist on this continent.

The Indian, he said, knew nothing of chemistry and geology as we understand these terms, but he was quick to take advantage of chemical combinations and geological conditions in his surroundings.

To prove his point the speaker cited his method of making flint arrowheads, spears and knives by using a piece of bone scoured or soaked in ashes and water. He also pointed to the Indians' ability to tan hides, make glue from fish scales, waterproof canoe seams with pitch, temper clay for pottery and dye his clothing.

On the subject of the nation's food supply Dr. Charles H. Bert of New York declared that chemistry had forever freed this country from the danger of a sugar shortage by the production of a sweetening substance from corn.

War Veteran's Kind Act Brings Him $6,000 Reward

San Francisco.—For an act of kindness done twenty years ago, Sergt. John A. Weaver, soldier of the World war, has received $6,000, the total value of an estate left him by Mrs. Mary E. Burns, who remembered through the years the kindness shown her when she was a landlady of a modest lodging house in San Francisco in 1906.

Recently recovered from disabilities incurred in the war, Sergeant Weaver came to San Francisco, produced a forgotten letter written by Mrs. Burns, certified its identity at a bank which was advertising for her relatives and later received the entire residue of the estate through a transfer executed by an officer of the Superior court.

HISTORY DAY AT LOGAN ELM PARK SUNDAY

explained why the pageant parts from Hiawatha were not put on by the Deerfoot tribe of Columbus, but he announced that he would send out his runner and bring in his tribes. In the course of a few moments the runner brought in five tribes. The Senecas, of Portsmouth; the Monocue tribe, of Washington C. H.; the Adocett tribe, of Wakefield; the Pontiac, of Coalton; the Cornplanters, of Adelphi, and Congo tribe, of this city. The Indians were attired in tribal uniform and they made a picturesque appearance, the ensemble, adding atmosphere and color to the historic meeting.

LOGAN'S SPEECH

"I appeal to any white man to say, if ever he entered Logan's cabin hungry and he gave him not meat; if ever he came cold and naked and he clothed him not. During the course of the last, long and bloody war, Logan remained idle in his cabin, an advocate of peace. Such was my love for the whites that my countrymen pointed as they passed and said, 'Logan is the friend of the white men.' I had even thought to live with you but for the injuries of one man. Colonel Cresap the last spring in cold blood and unprovoked murdered all the relatives of Logan; not sparing even his women and children. There runs not a drop of my blood in the veins of any living creature. This called on me for revenge. I have sought it. I have killed many. I have fully glutted my vengeance. For my country, I rejoice at the beams of peace. Yet do not harbor the thought that mine is the joy of fear. Logan never felt fear. He will not turn on his heel to save his life. Who is there to mourn for Logan? Not one."

Representatives of the following other tribes of Redmen were present: Tucson, of Tucson; Hoga Bogwa, of Dayton; Little Turtle, of Greenville; Deerfoot and Sioux, of Columbus, and the Summit tribe of Summit City. These did not take part in the snake trail.

The singing given as a portion of the program was well rendered. The choir consisted of fifteen people. They were Mrs. Frank J. Bennett, Mrs. Charles T. Gilmore, Mrs. Rolland Heiskell, Mrs. Ray Reid, Miss Helen Marion, Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. Walter Tedrick, Mrs. Robert Lee Baird, Mrs. G. G. Leist, Miss Carrie Old, Miss Stella Grimes, Miss Vera Walters, George E. Hammel, John Walters and E. C. Ebert.

Rev. Robert Lee Baird gave the invocation and pronounced the benediction.

Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones entertained those who took part in the program and a number of friends at their home in Park Place after the ceremonies.

Dutch Cremationists Celebrate Anniversary

In Holland there has just been celebrated a curious jubilee—the fiftieth anniversary of the Dutch Society for Optional Cremation. Since this society was founded a radical change of view has taken place in orthodox Protestant circles in favor of cremation. In 1876 a petition was sent to King William III and the second chamber requesting a revision of the law regarding burials and the introduction of a special authorization of cremation. Every year the petition was renewed but no answer was ever made to it. Only in 1913 was the first Dutch crematory at Westerveld, near Haarlem, opened, though cremation was not yet recognized by law. When Doctor Vaillant, the oldest member of the society died in April, 1914, at the age of ninety-six, it was decided to cremate his remains, thus making a test case. The state prosecuted the society but the supreme council of the Netherlands, after a long procedure, decided that cremation was not punishable. Since then the earthly remains of many Hollanders have been committed to the fires in the furnaces at Westerveld.

Sovietizing Gypsies

Soviet Russia is attempting to tame the gypsies. Recently representatives of these wanderers—who are of East Indian origin and have been roving through Europe since the Fifteenth century—formed an association, obtained recognition from the Soviet as a juridical body, and announced their intention to win their brethren away from nomadic habits and induce them to give up fortune-telling and horse-trading and settle down on farms or in industrial communities. In printing this report from Moscow a Budapest paper notes that a similar experiment with Hungarian gypsies was a failure.

A Daring Departure in 1921

..today, the nation's standard for small home heating

"BEAUTIFUL, yes, but will it work?" Many questions, like this one, greeted the Heatrola in 1921. It was so different in appearance and operation from anything known before.

But Heatrola "worked!" From the day of the first installation, its success was assured. For Heatrola, handsome as a fine mahogany cabinet, and as easy to keep clean, does the work of a basement furnace! It keeps every room in the house, upstairs and down, cozy and snug in coldest weather. And requires no more fuel than any stove requires. Tens of thousands of homes enjoyed Heatrola's furnace comfort last Winter—many thousands more will own Heatrolas before snow flies. Right here in this community, the homes of many of your neighbors are kept warm by this modern heating method. Let us show you these Heatrolas, and tell you how easily you can own one, too. Lines and Words in Poetry.

When W. Oron Towson, literary editor of the New York Evening Post, declared in an article last spring that the most beautiful single line of poetry is "A thing of beauty is a joy forever," by Keats, he provoked what proved to be an interesting and widespread discussion among critics and lovers of poetry. Commenting on the discussion the Ohio State Journal declares that it made many people more familiar with great poetic lines and thoughts.

Among some of the lines that were offered against Mr. Towson's favorite are the following:
The frail duration of a rose. — Freneau.
And high above the flight the lonely bugle grieves. — Mellen.
Our little life is rounded with a sleep. — Shakespeare.
The light that never was on sea or land. — Wordsworth.
What I aspire to be and was not, comforts me. — Browning.
Be thine own palace or the world's thy goal. — Stork.
Blossomed the lovely stars the forget-me-nots of the angels. — Longfellow.
Bare, ruined choirs were late the sweet birds sang. — Shakespeare.
Measure me, sky.
Tell me if I reach by song,
Nearer the stars. — Leonora Speyer.
Were I God,
What rapture it would be if but to watch,
Destruction crouching at the back of time. — Clark Ashton Smith.

We don't believe any list of this kind would be complete without those two lines in Shelley's "Hymn to Intellectual Beauty." One is: "Like moonlight on a midnight stream," and the other is: "Like the memory of music field." Meanwhile it would be difficult to say what single line in the English language we admire most. This is because the appeal of music, is gauged by moods of the moment. There are times when one finds beauty and inspiration in dynamic lines. Again one's heart is caught with the wistfulness of a line that is colored by a note of sadness. Shelley declared in his "Skylark" that "our sweetest songs tell of saddest thought;" and in a large measure he is right. It is the line that creep into the heart like a flower's fragrance or the line that flashes into the spirit like the smile of a child that fulfills the demands of the beautiful in art.

It would be interesting to know what the critics have to say about the most beautiful single word in the English language. We hold a love for "memory;" and yet there is something so appealing about the word "sea" or about the word "dream" or the adjective "sunlit," that it is, in the final analysis hard to choose the perfect one. — Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening.

The Daughter of the House, by Carolyn Wells.
Drums by James Boyd.
High Noon by Crosbie Garstin.
Little Ships by Kathleen Norris.
Mrs. Harter, by E. M. Delafield.
The Nightingale, Marjorie Strachey.
The Perennial Bachelor, by Anne Parish.
The Professor's House, by Willa Gather.
The Rector of Wyck, by May Sinclair.
Sixty-four, Ninety-four, by R. H. Mottram.

"READING WITH A PURPOSE"
A series of courses of reading on a variety of subjects are being issued by the American Library association. These courses are intended as guides to assist people who are dissatisfied with random reading and want to get the most out of the time available. Subjects on which the courses are now ready are: Biology, English Literature, Ten Pivotal Figures of History, some Great American Books, Economics. Besides the outline prepared by an authority on the subject, a list of from six to a dozen books, selected as best covering the field, are given for further reading.
Ask at the Circleville Public Library about these courses.

AMUSEMENTS
The picture which broke all long run records at road show prices is coming to the Metropolitan theater next Monday when Cecil B. DeMille's production of "The Ten Commandments" opens a four days engagement there at popular prices. Playing the "two-a-day" in New York City, it broke the record of 59 weeks which had been held by "The Covered Wagon," remaining at capacity business for 62 consecutive weeks. "The birth Of a Nation" was only able to last 44 weeks on Broadway, while "Way Down East" "The Four Horsemen" and "The Thief Of Bagdad" held up for a lesser period. About five million people have seen this remarkable picture since it was first shown at a two dollar scale.
In Los Angeles it held up for 31 weeks, Chicago and Philadelphia 20, Boston 14, San Francisco and Cleveland 8; while in Detroit, Washington and Cincinnati it stayed five weeks. Sidney, Australia, played host to it for 30 weeks as did Melbourne; while Paris and Auckland, New Zealand greeted it enthusiastically for 10 weeks. Berlin, as impoverished as it was at the time, played the picture for four weeks, with the best seats selling at five dollars each.

Rare American Coins
The half-eagle of 1797 with 16 stars is a very rare coin. At a recent sale in New York one of these half-eagles brought the highest price—$470. The next highest amount was $280 for a 1792 eagle with 13 stars.—Boys' World.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Profitable to Use High Quality Seed

Difficult to Keep Various Strains From Crossing.

The farmer of today, knowing that his grain is graded at the elevator and that the higher it will grade the better the price, is paying more attention to the quality of his seed than ever before. He knows that he cannot produce high-grade grain from low-grade seed and is willing to pay the price.

One of the difficulties in raising pure seed is the fact that plants of the grass family, to which corn and the small grains belong, produce pollen so profusely that it is extremely difficult to keep the various strains from crossing. This is particularly noticeable in corn where two varieties of different coloring grow in adjoining fields. Cobs showing kernels of different color are common.

In order to keep strains pure they must be grown in fields widely separated from fields of other varieties. As hay fever sufferers know, this fertilizing dust from the grain plants is carried for great distances by the wind, making the pure seed grower's task a difficult one.

Pure bred seed naturally is higher in price than lower grades of seed but the product is correspondingly heavier and higher in grade. The grower of fine strains of grain seed usually plants his fields to smaller acreage than the grower of grain for the general market and must exercise much greater care to keep it from contact with other fields. He must surround these fields with some other crops that cannot in any way interfere in the pollination of the seed which he is growing to sell to the farmer who demands the best quality for his acres.

Plan for More Poultry and Production of Eggs

Should farmers plan to increase their poultry and egg production in the future?

The success of such a procedure is very doubtful, according to F. A. Gougler, director of the poultry and egg marketing department of the Illinois Agricultural association.

"Competition is becoming keen in this line," states Director Gougler, "and only efficient producers from now on will be able to make this business pay. I do not think that those producers of poultry who plan to expand their business or individuals who now expect to enter the poultry business should move cautiously.

"So far this year approximately 2,000,000 pounds more of dressed poultry have been shipped to the large consuming centers than the total receipts to August 1 of last year. To be added to this is the information that we now have 37,000,000 pounds of dressed poultry in cold storage as compared with 23,000,000 at this time last year, or an increase of 14,000,000 pounds. Thus we find a large carry-over facing us in the future.

"On considering the present egg marketing situation, we find that there is an increase of 116,000 more cases of eggs in cold storage than reported at this date last year and our export in eggs has decreased as much as 450,000 cases. The reduction in our egg export is partially due to the fact that European countries, who furnished an outlet for our surplus poultry products in the past, are now getting to the point in production where they can supply their own needs.

"Reports from Midwestern states indicate an increase in production this year resulting from the favorable spring season and it is doubtful if the consumption of poultry and eggs will show any great increase in the future."

Feed for Dry Cow

After the cow is dry, the feed should depend largely upon her condition. If she is poor in flesh the feed should be abundant enough so that she will be in reasonably good flesh at the time of calving. If she is in fairly good flesh then little more than a maintenance ration is necessary. If good pasture is available it will be all that is necessary for dry cows. However, if the pastures are poor some additional roughage should be supplied.

FARM NOTES

Treat seed wheat with copper carbonate for smut prevention.

Sanitation is the best safeguard against hog cholera. Clean up the filth in the hog lot.

In horse measurements, three inches equals a palm, four inches a hand, and six inches a span.

It is claimed that the lower the curl in the horse's forehead, the better is his disposition.

Asparagus tops should be cut off and burned. Mark any bare places in the bed so that new roots may be set next spring.

Rhubarb should be well mulched with manure to insure protection through the winter and to provide fertile ground for next year's crop.

Waste apples may be fed to the hogs, and they help out in balancing the heavy corn ration for early fattening. In this way, their value is much greater than the usual return from cider.

Every generation yields its own commercial giants. That talent cannot be inherited.

FURNISHES BOOKS
TO WORLD'S EXILES

Church Club Aids Workers in Remote Places.

New York.—The Church Periodical club, a unique co-operating agency of the Episcopal church, has prepared an appeal to the general convention of the church at New Orleans for books, magazines, pamphlets, even newspapers—old and new, and on every subject—to carry on the work which it voluntarily assumed 37 years ago.

This organization's task is to keep the mission workers of the church, especially in the out-of-the-way places of the world, supplied with reading matter.

A globe-trotting lady, entering the hut of a missionary in one of these waste places some years ago, found him perched on a ladder, his head bent back, scanning the columns of an old newspaper which had been pasted over a stovepipe hole. It was the only thing he had to read. That was the inspiration for the founding of the club.

In the intervening years its work has extended to every part of the world. It supplies not only Bibles, prayer books and hymnals, but scientific works, fiction, magazines, newspapers, picture cards and calendars, games, sheet music and phonograph records, all free.

It maintains a score of "traveling libraries" and is practically the sole support of a half-dozen well-equipped permanent libraries in various parts of the world.

The particularly appealing feature of the club's work is in supplying reading material to those who are isolated in the far-off places. Children of the missionaries are not neglected, for to them are sent the latest children's books and games.

During the last year 31,761 current periodicals from 13,000 friends of the club were sent to the workers all over the world; 2,188 Bibles were distributed, 8,866 prayer books, 63,399 books of theological or secular character were supplied to institutions or individuals; and 521,188 old magazines and papers, 212,029 Christmas and Easter cards, 33,052 pictures and games and 9,254 pieces of music and records were put into the hands of workers all over the globe who otherwise would have had little, if any, of these diverting agencies of civilization to beguile their leisure hours.

TRY US FOR A WANT AD

"POPE JOAN" CENTER
OF MANY LEGENDS

Fantastic Tale Embellished
by Chroniclers.

Of all the crabbed, querulous, ecstatic tales of the Middle ages, none is more medieval, and none more provocative to doctors and sages, than the history of "Pope Joan," says John O'London's Weekly. About her and about her they have argued. She was a man, say some; a devil, say others; she occupied the throne of Saint Peter for any period of time from two and a half to nineteen years; she was named alternately Agnes, Gilberta, Gerberta, Margaret, Isabel, Dorothy, or Jutta; she did not exist at all. Probably not, indeed; she achieves but a small measure of verisimilitude in the hands of her chroniclers, and their differing stories do not help her. On one point only are they agreed; with one accord they wag their heads over her moral delinquency, and brand her as having, at a peculiarly inconvenient moment, given birth to a child.

It is between Leo IV, who died on July 11, 853, and Benedict, consecrated on September 29 of the same year, that legend endeavors to sandwich its woman pope. By the end of the Thirteenth century her story had won general credence. At the beginning of the Fifteenth century her supposed bust kept company in the cathedral at Siena with the busts of all authentic popes; and at the Council of Constance John Huss supported his claims by appealing to the case of "Agnes, who became Pope Joan."

The tale swells in extravagance as it grows in years. Stephen of Bourbon says simply that the woman was a clever scribe, who became notary of the Curia and rose to be cardinal and pope. A later version sends her first on a visit to Athens, where by her diligence she becomes a subtle reasoner. The fame of Rome reaches her ears; straightway she packs up her books and journeys thither, to become a professor at whose feet the greatest teachers are eager to sit. Celebrated for her mode of life no less than for her learning, she is unanimously elected pope; but alas! fine living makes her voluptuous, and, yielding to temptation, she falls.

A monk of Malmesbury, writing in 1366, says that, born in Mayence, Joan was sent by her parents to receive instruction in the sciences from male teachers. On one of them she came to look with more affection than became a pupil, and when he went to Rome, she donned man's dress and went with him; and there, because she surpassed everyone in learning, she was made cardinal by Pope Leo.

As to the punishment meted out to the disciple of Satan, when the birth of a child betrayed her, the authorities differ. One of them will have her discovered before her election, tied to the feet of a horse, dragged out of the city and stoned. Another allows her a two years' triumph and a natural death. A third merely deposes her; while Boccaccio (who, the wicked fellow, rather enjoys the tale) permits her to shed a few tears and retire into private life!

Its Advantage

They were discussing the advantages of the various college courses. "So you've decided on an art course instead of a scientific course?" Inquired the girl. "Oh, yes," answered the youth, "it seemed the better course for me." Her next question was, "Why?" and his reply to that was, "Well, everybody says it's easier to forget."

Marital Confidence

The expression "caption lecture" originally meant admonition or finding between husband and wife, which was supposed to be given in the privacy afforded by beds hung with old-fashioned bed curtains.

LITTLEFIELD GETS RESULTS FOR A. L.

Friends of Raymond B. Littlefield say he once had intentions of following the profession of civil engineering as his life work. "Should he not have changed his mind," they say, "he would have been infinitely successful, for he is always engineering something or other to a successful completion."

The latest engineering feat to win him credit was the building of the department of Rhode Island of the American Legion into one of the strongest beams in the national structure of the Legion. This was done during his administration in 1924.

Legion work has been a particularly favorite objective for Mr. Littlefield's engineering genius. He began serving the Legion as a charter member of James Stanton post of the

Raymond B. Littlefield.

Legion, Central Falls, R. I. He served in post offices until the bigger job came in 1923 when at the department convention he was elected department adjutant, which office he held for one year. Indication of his efficiency and popularity as a department adjutant is revealed by the incident of his election to the department commandership by acclamation at the department convention in August, 1924. He is at present serving as alternate national executive committee member.

The same gradual steps that took him from just a buck Legionnaire to the department commandancy, he followed in the great adventure of 1917-1918. He enlisted in the Rhode Island National Guard on May 23, 1916, and served in that organization with ranks of private, corporal and sergeant. Then came the World war, and he went overseas with the Seventy-third Art. C. A. as a sergeant major, where he served in the line of advance. He was recommended for a commission when the armistice was signed.

Mr. Littlefield was born in 1895 at Central Falls, R. I., where he was educated in the public schools.

Junior World's Series for Boys' Ball Teams

Holding of a junior world's series for boys' baseball teams throughout the country under the auspices of the American Legion will be proposed at the national convention of the Legion at Omaha from October 5 to 9 by the national Americanism commission.

Decision to this effect was reached following a recent conference between Legion officials and Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of the Western conference, who offered his assistance in working out the idea.

Recent developments portend success for the plan, if it is approved at the national convention.

Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, placed his stamp of approval on the plan to form the boys' league.

J. A. Butler, a member of the staff of the National Amateur Athletic association, and Allan Waters, of the Legion's community and civic betterment bureau, are co-operating in working out the details of the plan. Mr. Waters conceived and worked out the details of the plan of the junior baseball league for possible sponsorship by the Legion.

The present intention is to promote the organization of baseball leagues for boys of fourteen to seventeen in all parts of the country, according to Frank Clay Cross, director of the Americanism commission. Championships will be staged by districts, by states and regions, leading up to the national contest to be held each year at national conventions of the Legion. In the junior world series, as it will be called, the victor of all states east of the Mississippi river will play the champion of the West.

The junior world series is one feature of a general plan for Legion activity in sponsoring and promoting a greater active participation on the part of the general public in athletics.
